completely filled up, yet scores of breeders are demanding admittance with valuable consignments of high-bred horses.

Every one of the thirty stallions to be exhibited and sold is of high pedigree and good reputation. There are horses entered of all classes, horses to suit all purposes—the track, the coach and the dray. The event is of much interest to horse breeders, but of equal interest to those who have a fondness for horse displays and of great importance to those who desire to scoure for their stables horses of the best stock.

MRS. EWIN'S FUNERAL.

What the Ministers Said of a Vision See by the Dead.

Foundry Church Tuesday afternoon brought together several of the most distinguished of the Methodist pastors and a large company of relatives and friends. Rev. George Elliott, the present pastor of Foundry, conducted services and made the principal address. He related in conclusion some incidents of the short illness of Mrs. Ewin, tending to confirm the evidence of her life of usefulness in the church; that her death meant transition into the better life of the "summer land of song." One of these incidents was a vision on last Wednesday evening, which she related the next morning as follows: When asked if the light hurt her eyes, she said: "No, I can't see anything, but I saw a light last night. It was brighter than any electric light. It seemed to be some festive occasion, and I was in a great crowd and they were all dressed in white. Referring to this Rev. John Lanahan, D. D., the next speaker, insisted on the reality of such visions, and paid a beautiful tribute to Mrs. Ewin, whom he had known from infancy and at whose marriage ten years ago he officiated. Rev. Alex. Gibson, D. D., now of ceived Mrs. Ewin into the church twenty years ago, and made a feeling and eloquent prayer. The scriptures were read by Rev. John G. The scriptures were read by Rev. John G. Ames of the Episcopal church and Rev. Henry R. Naylor, D. D., presiding elder of the Washington district. The floral offerings were especially elaborate and beautiful. The bearers were Mr. Seth E. Tracy. Mr. Robert L. Bains, Dr. Wm. E. Dieffenderfer, Mr. Fred Van Dyne, Mr. G. Warfield Simpson and Mr. J. E. Pugh. The interment was at Oak Hill at sunset, and the angelus was rung during the sentences of committal to the ground—"earth to earth, ashes to ashes, dust to dust, in hope of a blessed resurrection."

Miss Sophia T. Townsend. The life and character of Ptolemy Soter, that one of Alexander's generals who in the partition of the great Macedonian's world-wide conquests came to the throne of Egypt, were dwelt upon with especial admiration, and the sketch of his work in creating institutions of learning in his new capital of Alexandria and drawing to his side learned men from all the centers of ancient culture, as well as in promoting in various ways the general welfare of his subjects, was exceedingly interesting. The reigns of his successors, most of whom had little to boast of apart from an interest in letters, were more hastily passed over, the essay concluding with an eloquent passage on the romantic career of the last of the Ptolemaic line, the gifted and beautiful Cleopatra.

A Valuable Washington Relic.

George W. Childs has presented to the Mount Vernon Association a proof of Washington's farewell address that is especially valuable because of the corrections written on it by Washington himself. In a few days this document will be placed with the other treasures at the great patriot's old Virginia home. This relic is on the second page of a newspaper dated
